

Smart Technology Association

www.smarttechnologyassociation.com

www.moresmarts.com

Sacred Scalar Coils?

When we play a frequency through our scalar coils, what is actually happening to the electrons/protons?

The energies from the sacred scalar devices are not magnetic.

The phenomena cannot be understood as pure particle dynamics. In point of fact, what is occurring when there is a potential difference in a wire is vortex action. The vortex action is occurring even in DC. When the vortex is changing, the vortex itself tends to expand and contract. When the changes happen fast enough a ripple will actually move through the vortex.

This primary aspect is also created in an ordinary coil. Our complex Scalar design incorporates various methods of bucking and counter rotational fields of cancellations that cause a reduction of the physical aspect. As a result, the changes that are held at the more subtle levels become much more apparent.

They are not pulled back to the physical, thus they are able to expand more easily. Over a period of a few minutes this expansion takes place. This is why it becomes stronger after a period of 5 minutes. The energies, as they continue to build occur at a subtle vibrational level, pure fields of consciousness. This is not an energy that humanity is normally experiencing.

This vibrational energy is pulling or pushing in the brain, typically stimulating magnetite. Magnetite is the most natural magnetic mineral on earth. It can often be seen elsewhere in the body with the most prominent being iron in the blood. As these materials move under the action of a magnetic field some of the base frequencies are continuously re-established. Some of these energies are transmitted through the air and most importantly the water in the air.

The magnetic bonds are being slightly stimulated due to the diamagnetic properties of water. Materials that oppose applied magnetic fields. These energies, as they come into the physical can be sensed. Though our scalar coils the aspect of cancellation, reduction of the physical energies and so on causes this stimulation to be significantly reduced so the physical stimulation that might override any of the subtle stimulations no longer takes place. Thus the energies that would have been shouted out, pushed out by the louder physical volume are significantly reduced and the result is the intensification of these energies of a subtle nature.

These subtle energies themselves are also then boosted by other means that are available to subtle energy but not having anything directly to do with the coils. Thus the relationship to the materials, the inert gases in particular, have an emphasis on the subtle body. This subtle information that is not entirely physical has enough of a physical hook or hold as to establish some transfer. The utilization of various other materials that you are aware of, while under vibration, can also produce benefits.

The energies from the sacred scalar devices are not magnetic. They are the subtle components which are made louder, stronger, clearer, due to the cancellation effect. The second aspect is in the cancelling coils. We note a reverse energy that is never present in most coils. This reverse energy could be seen as a sort of a sucking hole, a way in which various energetic components that may be present within people are drawn off. They are pulled into the effect and nullified and then released into the ground around the device. As a result of this the individual has a tendency to some reduction in resistance to the subtle energies that are presented. This is not so much due to the bucking effect of the coils itself as it is to the construction of the coil with the intent, the idea of how it is to be used.

Our sacred scalar technologies have enabled us to generate coherent subtle fields that assist in the release of stress while creating an environment for self repair.